

SHIP BREAST MILK, SHATTER GLASS CEILINGS

How breast milk shipping supports families
and your bottom line.

FOR MOMS & BABIES

Breastfed infants have reduced risks of:

- Asthma
- Obesity
- Type 1 diabetes
- Severe lower respiratory disease
- Ear infections
- Sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS)
- Gastrointestinal infections (diarrhea/vomiting)
- Necrotizing enterocolitis (NEC) for preterm infants

Breastfeeding can help lower a mother's risk of:

- High blood pressure
- Type 2 diabetes
- Ovarian cancer
- Breast cancer

When employers support workplace lactation, breastfeeding duration is dramatically increased. Comprehensive corporate lactation programs have reported that 75% or more of participating moms achieve 6 months or more of breastfeeding.

FOR EMPLOYERS*

Lower Medical Insurance Claims

Breastfed infants incur lower health costs from fewer doctor visits, hospitalizations, and prescriptions, which helps the company's bottom line when employers subsidize health insurance.

Reduced Absenteeism

Breast milk boosts infants' immune systems and helps protect them from common childhood illnesses - this is particularly true for babies in a childcare environment. One-day absences (to care for a sick child) occur more than twice as often for mothers of formula-fed infants than for those of breastfed infants.

Improved Employee Retention

Employers with lactation programs benefit from significantly higher retention rates over the national average and reduced recruitment, hiring, and training costs.

Improved Employee Satisfaction

Providing lactation support helps ease the transition back to work following maternity leave. Employees whose employers provide lactation support report improved morale, better job satisfaction, and higher productivity than those without it.

Improved Employee Recruitment

Companies with comprehensive lactation programs demonstrate a commitment to Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI). Additionally, these employers earn public recognition and media attention, which can boost recruitment efforts and general goodwill within their communities.
